OBSERVATIONS

The company imported footwear aimed at the lower end of the market. The company's customers consisted of retail shoe stores throughout New Zealand.

In 1997 the Warehouse began to sell shoes of similar quality however Roland Holdings could not compete on price. During the course of the next year the small provincial retail outlets also began to experience the effects of the Warehouse in their own town.

In April 1998 the company's bank appointed an investigating accountant to report on the bank's security. The report concluded that the bank should rely on its collateral security of property mortgages rather than the company's debenture.

Roland Holdings sold down its stock holding during 1998 and ceased to trade in December.

The shortfall to the bank was covered by the Director's personal funds.

LIQUIDATION COMMITTEE

At any time during the liquidation, any creditor may in writing request the Liquidator to call a meeting of creditors to consider whether a Liquidation Committee should be appointed, and if so, to choose the members of the committee.
